JAMES J. NASH.

Mexican Smugglers Killed.

GALVESTON, Dec. 13.—The News Eagle Pass special says: Sheriff Oglesby, with Robert Dow and James Oliver, visited Delgado's ranch last evening with a warrant for the arrest of Manuel Delgado on charges of smuggling and horse stealing. The ranch is twenty miles below Eagle Pass, on the Rio Grande, and has been famous for many years as a general rendezvous for horse thieves and outlaws from both republics. A gang of Mexican smugglers and desperadoes made it their headquarters. Arriving at the house the officers found Delgado asleep on the lower floor, and were about to seize him when he awoke and fled at Dow, the bullet grazing his head. The sheriff instantly fired, sending a bullet through Delgado's head. The firing aroused the gang of thieves, who attacked the officers and drove them from the ranch. Obtaining reinforcements the sheriff again attacked the ranch this morning. Many shots were fired and three Mexicans killed. The rest escaped into Mexico, carrying several wounded with them, and taking about thirty horses, all of which are believed to be stolen. Much plunder was found on the premises. Delgado has been a terror to the border, and was reported very rich. It is thought the attack will have the result of breaking up one of the worst gangs of smugglers on the border.

Death from Trichinosis.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 13.—Some two weeks ago the family of Frederick Honsmeyer, a well-to-do German of Farrentum, Penn., eleven miles from this city, eat heartily of a salad of which raw pork chopped fine was the principal ingredient. Last Friday week the entire family, consisting of father, mother, three sons and three daughters, were suddenly seized with a terrible illness. Yesterday Frederick, the eldest son, aged 20 years, died in great agony. John, the second son, is now so low that he is not expected to live through the night, and the rest are at the point of death. Before Frederick's death the physician became convinced that the disease was trichinosis. He secured a piece of the meat and with the aid of a microscope found it alive with trichinae spirales. The pork was purchased from a farmer and was one of a drove of hogs which he had raised on his own farm. Dr. McCollough says he expects another of the family to die to-night and he has no hopes that any of them will recover.

Riel's Body at Home.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 13.—Riel's remains were brought here last night from Regina, in charge of two Catholic priests, in a private car. The movement was secret. The car was run across the river to St. Boniface, where Riel's brother, Alexander, and a number of half-breeds were in waiting, and placing it upon a sleigh drove to his mother's home at St. Vitels, where the family were. The box was opened, disclosing the face somewhat blackened and slightly disfigured. The house was draped in black. The funeral will take place Saturday, when the body will be taken to the St. Boniface cathedral, where requiem mass will be held. The body will be buried in the St. Boniface Catholic cemetery, beside his father. Archbishop Tache has issued a manifesto in which he lays the blame of the half-breed uprising on the government officials and holds Riel blameless. In conclusion the archbishop sounds a note of danger and asks for the release of the half-breed prisoners.

Turn About.

[Washington Herald.]
The usual story of the impetuous English nobleman's marriage to an American heiress with gold enough to regild the somewhat tarnished ancestral escutcheons of her lord is to be varied by an event that is very seldom recorded, the wedding of an English girl of the highest rank, with an ample fortune in her own right, and a well-known man in the younger New York society, one who was nothing in particular to distinguish him from any of the handsome, well-groomed young fellows you may see any fine day in the windows of the University or Knickerbocker Club on Fifth avenue. Mr. Arthur James, who is to marry the Hon. Mary Cavendish-Bentinck, has lived abroad nearly all his life, and has many relatives who are very well known in London society. His fortune, which is by no means small, is far inferior to that of his to-be bride, and the match is the result of a romantic episode that might in suggestiveness be the basis of a two-volume novel. They met on a steamer, the weather was horrid, and an unexpected roll of the ship overturned the lady's rather rickety steamer chair and well-nigh tumbled her over the low rail into the boiling sea, when the young American "sprang to her assistance, etc. I think you could anticipate the rest, Arabella, if I had not prepared your mind for it by what has preceded.

Miss Cavendish-Bentinck is a niece of the Duke of Portland, and cousin to any number of people whose names are mighty props of society in the peerage. When I tell you that in addition to a tall, graceful figure and a face as delicate and clear-cut as a cameo, with a complexion which in its dainty fairness might rival the apple blossom of her native Stafford hills, she possesses some of the most valuable real estate in the West End of London and an ancestral home near Welbeck, under whose roof-tree countless Bentincks, and their mightier cousins of the great Devonshire Cavendishes, have been born, lived, and died since good Queen Bess' time, you will no doubt concur with me in the opinion that Mr. Arthur James is a very fortunate young fellow, indeed.

Mr. Dan Leuch, the genial proprietor of the Maison Doree received to-day five hundred eastern shell oysters, and Dan defies any cook in town to beat him in serving them to his numerous customers in the different styles.
